

It recently came to my attention that the FCC is considering dropping restrictions on cross ownership of media outlets by individuals and corporations. I hope you will keep in place this ban. It is my belief that the quality and quantity of news will suffer the more that media is concentrated into fewer hands. This may be "profitable" for corporations, but it is disastrous for the public interest, which is fed by more information and a wider variety of information, not less. I would appreciate a written response.

Sincerely,

Andrew Lehto
