

The internet has been and should always be considered a means of communicating and not an information service. The government's efforts to regulate on behalf of the "big boys" (Local exchange Carriers) consistently screws the consumer. Is our government no longer a government for the people, by the people or a mere spring board for big businesses?