

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

My name is Charles Jackson and I am writing to you regarding your reconsideration of the rules that require telephone companies to provide ISPs access to the public switched phone network. I oppose removal of these requirements.

I depend on and prefer using a my local Internet Service Provider to give me access to Internet services. I want more competition in the Internet marketplace, not less. And I do not want my options limited to a few large corporations.

Please continue to protect the ISP's access to public telephone networks, thereby protecting the rights of consumers like me.

Sincerely,

Charles Jackson
