

Consumers should be allowed to have portable cellular phone numbers. This enables them to change service providers with minimal inconvenience. Do power companies or cable companies have the right to force you to keep their services? No. However cellular providers think they should have the right to keep their customers from changing providers. They should spend more time on improving service and they would not have this problem.