

Our phone rang most nights with someone on the other end wanting to sell us something. Our dinners were interrupted, visits with friends and our family were bothered. It was always the same. Someone on the other end trained to not take no for an answer. We got where we would ask for the party to hold for a minute and we would put the phone down and walk away. Maybe 15 to 30 minutes later we would go back to the phone and the party would be gone. Back at the first of the year I asked to be put on the list for no more calls. On April first it took effect. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law had taken effect. Boy has it been great. My wife and I can look forward to an evening of quiet. If the phone rings now it's a friend or family member. Maybe someone from church. But it's not the sales people. I read and was told that some of these companies are trying to get the law changed. I heard these companies have gone to the FCC for help. Why can't I have the right to choose who calls me. Why can't I have the right to a quiet evening. Why can't I decide when I need this or that. I think the Indiana law is great. It has been good for us. Please don't let these companies bother us again. I was told that not everyone in Indiana asked for the law to work in the behalf. For those of us that did, please let it be there in the future. Please be on our side. Thanks.
