

Using legislation to prop up an out dated business model is wrong.

Using legislation to force the costs of this onto consumers, giving them no choice but to comply is very wrong.

Using legislation to punish the entire country for the wrongs of a few is very very wrong. It is in fact the exact opposite of what our founding fathers wanted in the criminal justice system.

This law would do all three of these wrongs. Legislating copy protection when all experts agree that no copy protection is unbreakable simply limits the average citizen. The thieves will still steal, only the law abiding citizens will be punished.

The entertainment industry is ignoring it's own past and simply fighting it's consumers tooth and nail instead of learning to work with consumers. Legislation helping them do this hurts both sides in the end.
