Based on CMRS carrier representations to FCC staff, Virtual NPA-NXX arrangements are only used by cellular carriers when the landline and wireless customer are in the same exchange. Consequently, the following language, if added to the FCC’s rules, would allow Virtual NPA-NXX arrangements only in the circumstance described by the CMRS providers to the FCC:

“Virtual NPA-NXX arrangements may only be used for calling from a landline customer within an incumbent local exchange carriers’ (ILEC) exchange to a wireless customer that is also located within the same ILEC exchange.”
