

Cable Internet

It is imperative that cable companies be required to open their fiber so that customers can select a high speed internet service provider of their choice. As it now exists, many of the communities locked into one provider such as AT&T find that the company is oversubscribed and puts a governor on the system so that the subscriber really isn't getting high speed service.

Sally Williams, retired Chair
Telecommunications Task Force
City of Berkeley

for a copy of our telecom study, go to the COB website.