

I just found out today (3/7/03) that the FCC is contemplating removing the limit on ownership of different media outlets as it did for radio in 1996. I am very concerned about the effect this will have on the distribution of information to the public that encompasses multiple points of views. I already listen to radio online (KEXP) because I cannot hear new and varied music over the local airwaves. Please don't allow fewer and fewer companies to determine what is worthwhile to report. It is too often limited to what sells products and therefore puts more money in the companies' hands rather than the public being well informed.