

I am strongly opposed to relaxation of traditional controls limiting ownership of media outlets within a given market. I consider the past experiment of lifting limits on national radio ownership a huge failure, since now we have many fewer choices for broadcast content. It all sounds the same, the music is the same 8 tunes currently being marketed by the large media conglomerates. I do not feel that relaxation of the limits serves the public interest, but rather serves corporate interests alone. Please remember -- It is the responsibility of the FCC to server the public interest.
