

Dear FCC, I am writing to voice my opinion in regards to the recent question on broadcast medium ownership. I believe that it is in the best interest of democracy, which is the voice of the people, to NOT allow ownership of these powerful broadcast mediums to lie in the hands of the few. Rather, I see that we are better served by assuring that communications organizations are spread across a wide spectrum of views. If not, many voices of democracy will be shouted down by those powerful corporations serving not the greater good of the people, but of their own financial/ideological interests. I ask that you guard our airwaves as the property of all United States citizens. The power of broadcast communication is too important to be turned over to a small, yet aggressive, selection of corporate interests. The value of the message lies not only in any economic return. Rather, diligent debate in a democracy is better served by allowing ownership to be spread among a wide diversity of views. This is the exercise of speech made by a free people. Let the voice of all be heard.
