Dear Sirs:

I am staunchly in favor of the FCC finally imposing this rule with the mobile phone carriers

It is the only way to promote customer service and innovation. The carriers know that I, like a lot of subscribers would change service to a better carrier if it were not the fact we would lose our number which is already disseminated to friends, family and most importantly, business contacts.

Please follow through with the rules and do not let the carriers dictate what playing field to use.

Thank you,

Subject: Cell phone number portability

Honorable Chairman Powell:

I urge you to grant cell phone users portability of their numbers. This is the only way the consumers can hold Service Providers accountable for their service or lack thereof. If you want to switch Providers, you have to switch phone numbers, which is difficult, as you must notifying all your friends and business associates, print new business cards and stationery, etc.

If we forced the consumer to change phone numbers when changing long distance carriers, we'd still be using AT&T.

Yours truly,
