

I oppose any changes to the rules regarding ownership of affiliates. It should be obvious that diversity is the key to free speech. Allowing huge corporations to decide what Americans see, hear and read is a politically charged issue. The biased news coverage of the war in Iraq should be evidence enough the major networks answer to greed rather than truth. The past two years have given many reasons to be ashamed of my country. This is one more. The arrogance of the FCC to refuse to allow open public debate on this issue and ignoring requests by members of Congress is the beginning of what we will be subjected to when these rules are changed.
