

If someone is able I would appreciate a response. Where (what document, statute, section etc) is it written that the phone company must accept a third party's assertion that I agreed to services and must pay them without anything signed by me? Me and many others have been billed for "NOL INTERNETMONTHLY FEE". They bill through a company called Hold Billing Service. Hold Billing Services sent me to the company called National Online Service. They always say their computer is down and will call me back but do not. They are billing me for some kind of internet yellow pages or website. I have never heard from or agreed to these charges and, in fact, cannot locate them on the internet. It is a scam that we as consumers cannot fight because the phone company makes us pay. That is why I want to know what document requires the local phone company to bill on behalf of a third party with no proof that I agreed to or owe for services, that often don't even exist. I hope you can help. Thanks.
