

I am very strongly against changing the present rule that any one company can have more than 35% of the telecommunications capabilities. I am convinced that for our democracy to continue to work well, we need many stations with a smaller portion of the telecommunications market. One or several of these stations will be more likely to present the minority view or undertake investigative reporting.

I am seriously concerned.

Sincerely,

Helen Pfuderer