

The FCC seemed to be opposed to monopolies when it ruled against EchoStar. I would have liked to see satellite compete against cable. This rule change seems to be inconsistent. Maybe there is something other than a decision based on the merits of competition going on here.