

Dear FCC:

Laws regulating media ownership should be strengthened, not weakened. Greater consolidation of media corporations leading potentially to a greater concentration of control of broadcast media and the programs and information made available to the public will set an extremely dangerous precedent. Since media corporations wield such tremendous cultural and political power, the government must, in the interest of American democracy, protect Americans against further centralization of media power. Consider please that centralized control of information is undeniably and profoundly anti-democratic. Please act in the interest of our democracy and advocate for stronger rules that provide for greater diversity in the ownership of broadcast media.
