

Please take the time to investigate the effects of the proposed changes. I am not against this by default, but I am concerned that a small number of powerful interests have hijacked this process and will prevent it from progressing in a manner that will be most beneficial to the public. This is serious business. It may only be about efficiencies and money to the powerful few who control the media, but to us, it is a question of freedom and democracy, education and information. Given the stakes, what's your rush?