

I do not support lessening the restrictions on the number of television and radio stations, and newspapers one company can own. Michael Powell sites the many cable news outlets as a reason to lessen the present restrictions. I think Mr. Powell knows that a handful of companies own most of those cable networks already.

I agree with Ted Turner in his recent op-ed piece -- allowing companies to buy more media outlets will restrict opposing views on news shows, and will make it impossible for small media companies to exist independently.
