

I have two scenarios on which I would appreciate the FCC's opinion in regard to the unauthorized fax rule.

1. Would it be acceptable at a trade show or similar event to have a sign-up sheet where multiple parties (such as mortgage brokers) sign on one page if at the top of the page there is a clear statement that signing the form indicates their authorization to receive fax advertisements, assuming that each party also has to write in their fax number and sign next to it; or would the FCC require each party to sign their own authorization form.

2. If you have a directory where numerous parties include their fax information, and the publisher of the directory has each participant sign an authorization for the purchasers of the directory to be able to send fax advertisements, would that consent transfer to all purchasers of the directory? Or does the Rule require an authorization specific to each company that wishes to fax to the authorizing company.

Thank you in advance for your time and consideration.
