Our democratic way of life is based on free unlimited access to unlimited sources of news and information.

We admonish you, the public's regulating agency, to assure open airways to us as citizens. We do not think that allowing consolidation of media ownership would fulfill your agency regulatory power.

Respectfully

Yo, Mike:

So, if I understand your statements at the Senate Hearing, you discounted public input because the public is "too stupid" to understand the ramifications of this "modest" deregulation. But if the public doesn't understand that we are already screwed in a sea of shit and that the big five <sup>are</sup> deleting news + information, and <sup>committing</sup> other crimes against us. All you have to do is watch the BBC. Clear Channel is a perfect example of lifting limits.

What unmitigated arrogance!

Would you have considered backing down if you had received 500,000 legal notices? I think not, the fix was in, baby.

How much compensation will you be getting from NAB and other industry folks? Ah, come on, you know you will.
