The Campaign Legal Center is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization established to act as a legal resource and to advance the public perspective in development and enforcement of campaign and media law. Through its legal staff, the Legal Center participates in administrative and legal proceedings in which the nation's laws governing campaigns, elections, and political advertising are interpreted and enforced.

The Legal Center's newly established Media Program shapes political broadcasting policy by promoting awareness and enforcement of political broadcasting laws through Federal Communication Commission rulemaking proceedings, Congressional action, and public education.

Specifically, the Media Program is active in:

- 1) Participating in FCC administrative actions and rulemakings regarding broadcasters' public interest obligations;
- 2) Educating federal candidates on their broadcasting rights and serving as a resource during campaigns regarding federal communication law;
- 3) Representing the public interest in formal and informal actions against broadcasters for failure to adequately supply publicly disclosed information when requested or meet other political broadcasting requirements; and
- 4) Seeking to improve the political process by educating the public on media law issues.

The Legal Center is directed by Trevor Potter, former Federal Election Commissioner and Chairman. Mr. Potter has specialized in the area of campaign finance and election law for the last 15 years. He also served as assistant general counsel to the FCC in 1984-1985. Mr. Potter served as General Counsel of the McCain campaign for President in 2000 and represents Senator McCain and the Members of Congress that co-sponsored the McCain-Feingold campaign finance legislation as the legislation's constitutionality is challenged in the Supreme Court. Mr. Potter is a nonresident Senior Fellow at the Brookings Institution and Member of the D.C. law firm Caplin & Drysdale.

Amy R. Wolverton is associate legal counsel and director of the Media Program at the Campaign Legal Center. Previously, Ms. Wolverton was an attorney and fellow for the Citizens Communications Project at the Institute for Public Representation, one of Georgetown University Law Center's legal clinics, representing major consumer and civil rights organizations in litigation and administrative actions before the FCC. Ms. Wolverton was in-house counsel for Cox Communications, Inc. and an associate at the firm of Alston & Bird in Atlanta doing both commercial business and First Amendment litigation and negotiation. Ms. Wolverton is a co-chair of the Federal Communications Bar Association's On-line Practice Committee, and, as a past board member, she remains actively involved in Women in Cable and Telecommunications.
