

I think the current schedule of having everything move over by 2006 is a good one, and should not be abandoned. I would also welcome something saying that broadcasters would have to broadcast at least one channel at truly high definition (720p or better), rather than having all the HDTV spectrum go to a slew of low def channels (we've already got far more than enough channels).