

I see no apparent reason why changing the transmission medium should accord broadcast networks any more rights than they currently have. I was under the impression that the move to digital was to reduce required bandwidth, not the public's rights.