

This is wrong. I'm speaking about over the air broadcasts using the "High Definition spectrum", the American public owns the airwaves. We're granting the broadcasters the right to broadcast their signals over the air without interference. This spectrum is limited, and we're granting them this right. The fcc licenses it out to the broadcasters, but at the end of the day, it's our spectrum. Viacom has the gall to tell the FCC that if they don't restrict all recording of OTA broadcasts (and other broadcasts) on OUR spectrum, they will stop broadcasting hdtv completely.

They'll still keep the spectrum they were granted to convert to hdtv... This is wrong. Please do not pass this. Please listen to the citizens of the United States. I should be able to record a football game broadcast in HDTV if I want to. If I want to record that game while I work and contribute to the economy, I should be able to do that. It should not be up to the broadcasters to decide if I can watch a game.
Thank you
