

The last two major restructurings of Amateur Radio, No-code Tech, and the most recent, dropping two classes of licenses and combining exams should offer all the incentive needed for new Hams to enter the Amateur Service. Expanding privileges for entry level hams is unnecessary at this point. An upgrade to the next level of license (easy to do nowadays!) is the answer, rather than rewarding those who don't wish to put any effort into furthering thier license.