

The FCC should not be the handmaiden of big corporations and remember that it's mandate is to serve the public. This proposal implies that the general public has only a passive role as "consumer" and does not need the same access as "professional" media developers. Nothing could be farther from the truth. For the new digital media to be crippled this way is offensive to the very concept of our free and open democratic society.