

We are fast becoming the 8th largest city in the nation, yet we do not have a smooth jazz radio station. We used to - 106.7. Then, someone in their almighty wisdom changed the venue to contemporary pop (just another among many. Then, gradually it changed to the "NEW" 106.7 and now plays about 98% rap. I don't have anything against rap, though I don't listen to it, but if San Antonio isn't going to allow a smooth jazz radio station, then allow the Austin smooth jazz station to at least reach San Antonio. The air waves cut out when you reach Selma coming from Austin. Who determines the "mix" of music on our stations? We already have numerous pop, rock, rap, and country stations. Amazing how the change was so gradual that by the time those of us who listen to smooth jazz and prefer it over all over music, we were astounded and disappointed with the change. There is a smooth jazz audience in San Antonio. Too bad you don't recognize that.
