Re CS Docket No. 98-120

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

Dear Secretary Dortch

On January 20, 2004, Peter Brubaker, President and CEO, Susquehanna Media Co.; Joe Gans, President and CEO, Gans Multimedia Partnership; Gary Shorman, President and CEO, Eagle Communications; Richard Sjoberg, President and CEO, Sjoberg's, Inc., and Diane Burstein, Deputy General Counsel, NCTA, met with Jordan Goldstein, Senior Legal Advisor to Commissioner Copps, Catherine Bohigian, Legal Advisor to Commissioner Martin; Johanna Mikes Shelton, Legal Advisor to Commissioner Adelstein; Stacy Robinson Fuller, Legal Advisor to Commissioner Abernathy; and Jonathan Cody, Legal Advisor to Chairman Powell. During these meetings, the cable operators discussed the concerns of operators of smaller cable systems and systems located in smaller and rural markets with respect to a digital must carry requirement.

Cable operators explained their interest in providing a differentiated product that includes high definition ("HD") programming and described how cable carriage of digital broadcast signals is occurring without any FCC mandate. They described their roll-out of HD programming, which in many cases includes carriage of commercial and non-commercial HD broadcast signals. In several cases in the smaller and rural markets in which they operate, local HD digital broadcast programming is not available over the air because the stations are either transmitting in low power or are not yet transmitting high definition programming. Copies of the attached materials, which provide examples of the HD programming and promotional efforts of Susquehanna Media Co. and Eagle Communications, were distributed at these meetings.

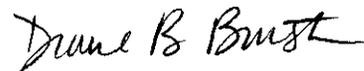

In addition, the cable operators described how they provide local programming of interest to their community. Operators explained how they produce local news and information programming on several of the systems they operate. They also discussed how local television stations do not provide local news and information for many of the smaller and rural communities served by the cable systems they operate.

No. of Copies rec'd 074

Finally, the cable operators described how a dual or multicast must carry rule would burden their systems by using up valuable channel capacity and imposing additional costs. They urged the Commission to let the marketplace continue to work by not imposing a dual carriage or multicasting requirement.

Respectfully submitted,

Diane B. Burstein

SUSCOM

HD CAPABLE VS. HD READY

HD Capable refers to an HDTV set that requires a tuner/decoder in order to receive high definition programming.

HD Ready refers to an HDTV set that has an integrated tuner/decoder. SusCom's HDTV service includes an HDTV terminal (tuner/decoder), so no additional equipment is necessary.

WHAT DO I NEED TO GET HDTV?

HDTV service from SusCom includes an HDTV terminal (tuner/decoder) that is compatible with either HD Capable or HD Ready sets.

You will also need component video cables and audio cables to connect this equipment to your HDTV set. Additional connection options you may want to consider include "Fire-Wire" and DVI (Digital Video Interface).

Make sure to discuss these options with your sales representative at the time of purchase.

WHAT IS HDTV?

HDTV (High Definition Television) is High Resolution Digital Television combined with Dolby Digital Surround Sound. The resolution or "clarity" of picture with HDTV is significantly better than that of a standard television picture.

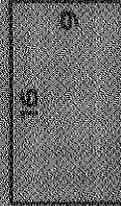

ASPECT RATIOS

Aspect ratio refers to the ratio of picture width to picture height. The National Television Standards Committee (NTSC) established a 4:3 aspect ratio when television first began. Accordingly, traditional television programs and sets have been produced to this standard. Television sets that have an aspect ratio of 4:3 are sometimes referred to as "NTSC sets."

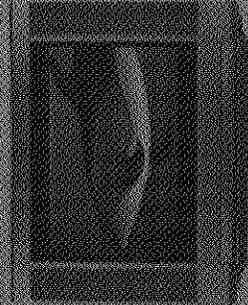

In contrast, high definition program signals are created to be wider than they are tall, with an aspect ratio of 16:9, to provide a more panoramic view. To allow viewers to see HDTV programming in the manner it was produced, HDTV sets have been manufactured to fit this size.

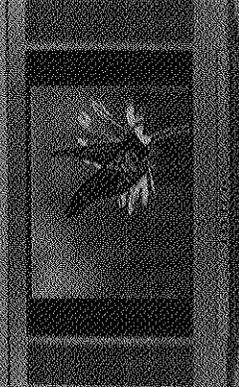

Aspect Ratio Issues to Consider When Purchasing an HDTV Set:

There are some television sets with a 4:3 aspect ratio that are HDTV capable. When viewing HDTV programming on this type of set, because it was produced in a 16:9 aspect ratio, the picture will be "letterboxed" with black bars across the top and bottom of the screen.

Conversely, if you purchase a wide screen HDTV set with a 16:9 aspect ratio, standard programming will be displayed on your 4:3 aspect ratio, so the picture will have black bars down both sides of the screen. (Some HDTV sets have the capability to stretch the image to fill the screen; this is something you need to discuss with your salesperson at the time of purchase.)

RESOLUTION

The resolution of your television determines the crispness and detail that you see in your picture. The number of pixels on the screen determines resolution. Pixels are a collection of small, colored dots that when combined together create a picture. The word pixel stands for Picture Element. The more pixels on the screen, the clearer and more defined picture you'll see!

Traditional standard television sets can display up to 348,920 pixels. That sounds like a lot, but it's low resolution compared to HDTV sets that can have up to 2,073,600 pixels!

So Which Resolution is Considered to be High Definition?

Based upon standards created by the Advanced Television Systems Committee (ATSC), 720p and 1080i formats are considered High Definition, 480p, while not officially considered High Definition, is DVD quality video.

720p and 1080i are the number of active vertical scanning lines on your HDTV screen. The letters following these numbers refer to the scanning system of your HDTV: "i" stands for "interlaced" and "p" stands for "progressive."

Resolution Issues to Consider When Purchasing an HDTV Set:

Native Resolution

There is a potential difference between the actual resolution of your television set, and the resolution of the programming signal being sent to your TV. Native Resolution refers to the actual resolution of your TV—not the resolution of the delivered signal. For instance, let's say you're watching a high definition program which was produced in a 1080i format. However, your TV only has a Native Resolution of 480p. In this case, the signal being received by your TV will be down-converted to your TV's Native Resolution, so your TV can display the program. HDTV sets with a Native Resolution of 720p or higher which receive programming produced in a format lower than 720p will up-convert the program to meet their Native Resolution. You'll want to make sure to discuss this feature with your sales representative when shopping for an HDTV set.

What is HDTV?

HDTV stands for High-Definition Television. It is digitally formatted to provide life-like images and CD-quality sound, such as Dolby Digital Surround Sound. Video Quality increases from 525i with a standard analogue signal to 1081i with HD. With the superb image quality and sound, HD is a new way to look at the world, and is as revolutionary to the television industry as the first color televisions were-taking the viewer's experience to a new level.

What do I need to get started?

To receive HDTV service, you will need a HDTV (high definition television), Component Video Cables, and a Digital Converter, which may be purchased or leased from Eagle.

Why Eagle HD? Let's Compare.

- Price. You may purchase a Digital Converter from Eagle at a cost of $360, or leasing is available for just $12.95 p/mo. Let's compare this to Direct TV (satellite), where the equipment will cost you $399 + $24.99 shipping/handling with no leasing option available.
- Long-Term Contracts. With Eagle HD, there are no contracts. With Direct TV, you will be required to commit for at least a year before they will begin working with you.
- Service. Eagle provides local service and support and is available to promptly address any problems or questions you may have. Eagle also provides FREE professional installation in your home. Compare this with Direct TV, where the closest service technicians will have to drive from Wichita to provide the service you need, and installation will cost you $49!

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

High-Definition Programming Now Being Offered By Eagle Communications

Hays, KS- Eagle Communications is excited to announce the arrival of High Definition programming to our cable services. "We feel fortunate to provide this service for the size of communities that we serve, as well as local programming where people don't have to have a dish to get high-end video programming."

-Rex Skiles, Eagle Communications General Manager

HDTV is digitally formatted with twice the resolution of a standard digital or analog signal giving you superb picture quality and Dolby Digital Surround Sound 5.1. With a HDTV it will be a movie theater experience at home.

A HDTV or a HD ready TV is required along with a HD digital converter, component video cables, and audio cables in order to view HD programming. At this time, Eagle is providing ESPN HD and Discovery HD. Currently off air HD signals, such as those produced by NBC, are not available at this time in this area. Eventually, the networks will be carried in HD.

Eagle has been working to get HD programming for little less than a year. The cost to get ESPN HD and Discovery HD was about $17,000 or about $8500 per channel. The programming is currently available only in Russell and Hays. Eagle offers the HD digital converter for $360 or $13.95 a month to rent. Programming costs is $4.95 a month, however, until the end of this year programming is FREE.

On October 26th Eagle along with Horizon Appliance & Electronics, Regal Audio & Video, T-bones and The Golden Q allowed the public to view the KC Chiefs and Buffalo Bills game in HD. The event was a huge success. Anyone who missed the event or would like to take a second look at HD can stop by the Eagle Cable Office in Hays, Horizon Appliance & Electronics or Regal Audio & Video to see Eagle HD programming on a HDTV.

Next year the cable systems in Ellis and WaKeeney will be upgraded from 450 MHz to 550 MHz, this will allow those systems to receive HD programming. The addition of HBO HD will also happen next year. Other programming options are a possibility as well, but nothing is definite at this time.

We welcome you to stop by our facilities to learn more about HD programming and any of the other services offered by Eagle Communications. We are continually looking forward to expanding our services in order to provide the newest technologies in cable.

Dear Customer,

Hello, I'm Travis Kohlrus, Director of Business Development, and on behalf of all of us at Eagle Communications, I want to thank you for your interest in High Definition Television. You have been watching our High Definition (HD) programming for about 2 to 6 weeks and we are very interested in your feedback regarding HD. We know HD is on its way to becoming a mainstream product and we want to be sure we are making the right decisions to increase the value of this product for you, our customer. In the next 3 months, Eagle will be investing more money into this technology to provide you with additional HD programming and higher end boxes that include a PVR (personal video recorder).

Please take a moment to provide us with some feedback about our product by completing the survey below or calling me at 785-625-5910 or toll free at 877-625-9901. In turn, you receive another 3 months HD programming, FREE.

- 1) What do you like most about our High Definition product? What do you like least?

- 2) How is the Motorola HD digital set top box performing for you?

- 3) Which HD programming did you watch most? Discovery HD or ESPN HD

- 4) What types of programming or what particular programming do you watch in general?

- 5) What HD programming would you like to see added next?

- 6) Any additional thoughts or comments concerning Eagle HD programming?

Thanks again for your time. We continually strive to serve you better and improve our products to meet your Entertainment needs. We are confident, with your feedback, we will be able to groom this product into your premier entertainment source.

Thanks,

Travis Kohlrus
Director of Business Development
