

Thank you in advance for listening to my comments. My issue is with the "knee-jerk" reaction to the "janet jackson" incident. WHY, WHY, WHY, is everyone freaking out about this? Let me just say, that I did NOT approve of her little show. I thought the whole show was really lame anyway. The only good thing about the show was Kid Rock. But all that aside, I think that everyone needs to take a deep breathe and step back and remember that we were all kids at one time and that the decisions we make now will effect ALL in the years to come. I believe that we are all forgetting that we were all "crazy" kids at one time and we were fine growing up with change. Yes, Janet Jackson SHOULD be fined and leave this as a learning lesson for the future. Yes, the fines should be raised to detour the networks with taking liberties. However, this whole "lets save everyone" attitude right now is wrong. By doing this we will lose some of the really good things. Our fore fathers remembered that the decisions that they made then, HAD to stand the test of time. So now the FCC and all the Ethics Committee's and whatever other committees are grown out of this, their decisions MUST be able to stand the test of time.

Please let me know if there is a congress person I can e-mail or senate member, or anyone else that I write to maybe this issue can cool down.

Again, thank you for listening and for your help
