

It is my hope that the Commission will approve RM-10413. I have been an amateur radio operator for the past ten years and have spent that entire time trying to learn morse code. I have purchased tapes, CD's, computer programs, books, tried the suggestions of other hams, everything I can think of. I just can't learn the code. I'm sure I am not alone. There must be others out there that want to expand their amateur radio capabilities but have found morse code a hurdle. Why should someone that can do everything any other ham can do be held back simply because they can't learn morse code. We don't exclude people from certain occupations because they have learning disabilities. We help them to achieve their goals. Maybe not being able to learn morse code is a disability stopping some hams from reaching their goals?
