

In seeking to address what has become a very complex set of issues the ARRL has presented a plan to the FCC (the Commission) which addresses the preceived needs of coming generations of amateur radio operators, current amateur radio operators, and the public. This plan addresses band usage, operator class, entry consideration (into amateur radio), and most tenderly, the future of morse code within America's Amateur community. I have supported, or rejected, other plans put to the Commission in recent months. None however have been as broad ranging and thoughtout as this plan. I encourage the Commission to act quickly in it's acceptance and adoption of the ARRL plan. JWSmith
