

Any communication over any line of communication, voice or otherwise should be regulated. In the first place this will jam up a lot of normal service to regular internet users and probably cause delay after delay. Some real thought should be given to this matter before allowing any usage other than regular internet usage, that is no voice communication.