

It is ridiculous to think the FCC would prohibit XM, or any service, from providing local weather and traffic reports. I purchased XM because I spend a great deal of time driving between Orlando and Tampa. The traffic reports have been invaluable in saving me time and frustration. These updated, detailed reports are unavailable anywhere else. This is to say nothing about the better quality of broadcasting covering any genre XM provides over FM and AM. The FCC has already gone too far in their censoring of "indecent" radio. That is one of the reasons I began subscribing to XM in the first place. Now, I pay for a service that contains "objectionable material" as well as quality programming. As an adult, I can decide to tune in or not. I don't mind paying for this service, but I do mind when the FCC tries to limit where I get my traffic information. Please consider the implications of making ridiculous decisions as myself and my fellow voters consider who we will vote for in the future.
