

Address,

I commute heavily between Dallas, Austin and Houston, Texas. I rely heavily on my XM Radio for Entertainment value and more importantly news content on Weather, Traffic and Financials. As I commute from city to city, I get a summary on weather and traffic to plan my travel route and my business agenda. You can not receive advance notice of weather and traffic prior to departing one city to another through traditional FM radio stations. As of today, there are no other convenient (real-time) and dedicated mediums in which to receive this value-add information while traveling.

Removing or even the thought of removing this value-add content adds no "tangible value" to the NAB party. I am glad to see XM Radio thriving and hope to see its niche broaden into other market segments.

Regards,

John Gulley
