

aol took 88 dollars out of my bank account after saying that those charges had been erased, thus causing an additional charge of 64 for a total of 151 dollars debited to me. This was done with out my knowledge or consent infact i was told verbally three times by an aol rep resentative that they would not enter my account i also have several written emails from the company stating that a credit was issued to me this credit was later denied having been sent. i would like the money sent to my home adress as this account is now blocked.