

The captioning available on the TV networks for the hearing impaired is not universal across all offerings! This makes it difficult to follow a program/movie etc. Also, the quality of "some" of the captioning is often littered with misspellings and grammatical errors, hardly applicable to what the actors are saying. I sometimes wonder if the captioner has English as their first language, as the nuances of the expressions are often missed. I am sure they can do a better job than what we are offered!
