

Why are we - each and every broadcaster - "guilty until proven innocent"?The criminal courts don't impose sanctions on innocent citizens because they might break the law. We don't lock up or put on probation citizens of this country because they might commit a crime! Under the legal foundation of "innocent until proven guilty", we must first try the accused, weigh the evidence, and then - and only then - punish them if they are found guilty of an offense. Why is the FCC proposing to treat broadcasters with less respect and due process than common criminals receive under our justice system?
