

As a hard of hearing viewer, I encounter programs on different channels that I feel should be captioned but aren't, and I have no way of verifying whether a station is providing the required amount of captioning that they are legally required to do or if there might be a problem in transmission, or to otherwise troubleshoot what might be happening. I feel that all stations should have information on file and readily disclose to the public how much captioning is being provided, which programs are being captioned, etc. This information has to be collected as per the current captioning requirements, and the public should be able to access the information if they rely on captioning.
