

Cat Carpenter -Actress

In the debate surrounding the threat to localism posed by unfettered media consolidation, AFTRA has routinely noted that corporate practices such as voice-tracking have the effect of compressing salaries and reducing job opportunities for broadcast talent in addition to their role in eliminating local perspective from local media. AFTRA has also argued that consolidation deprives recording artists of fair access to radio based on their popularity in a particular local area and the quality of their recordings.