

Translator services like K-Love Radio (EMF) offer a valuable service. They provide quality programming at a lower cost over a larger area than can be provided by single point stations. LPFM stations have a place in the marketplace, but not at the expense of translator services. Smaller or remote markets would likely be severely underserved if translator broadcasts were to be reduced. "Family friendly" content stations like K-Love and Air-1 provide a valuable and highly desirable service to the communities that they serve.