

CALEA has the potential to have an incredibly negative impact on small-scale, community-run ISPs. The requirements would greatly stifle innovation and network deployment. Networking technologies are also rapidly adopting a more peer-to-peer architecture, making CALEA requirements ungainly if not downright unenforceable. In the end, one may end up having to enforce regulations that are impossible to monitor, creating an incredible headache for multiple governmental agencies.