

Since many phone lines in our area are not capable of high speed internet service shouldn't the cost of those lines be cheaper. If my neighbors' phone line is capable of DSL service and mine is not, then shouldn't the pricing of the lines reflect the quality and quantity of services it is capable of?