

Our local SIP is doing an exceedingly good job of serving us. When the local telephone company, SBC, has been the DSL supplier, many of its customers have told me of poor service from them. I use SBC for my telephone, and believe they are entitled to that business, which they do well. Giving them a monopoly of the DSL business is going in the opposite direction which was mandated when ATT was broken up to allow competition. Allowing the independent "Baby Bells" to merge into BIG "Baby Bells" was a bad enough decision without going further. Are you going to give them back the long distance business monopoly too??? Please say no to giving them broadband service also. Thank you.
