

I am writing to oppose granting an exception to the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law for the Consumer Bankers Association. Just because I may have an account with them should not give them the right to call me at my residence and offer me services. They have many other ways of reaching me including the monthly statement they mail, email and their internet website which I use for on-line banking.

The telephone privacy law has had the single largest positive effect on American home life in the past 30 years of any legislation. Home is now a refuge and a place of peace. Please do not take us back to where we were.

Sincerely,

George J. Huntley
