

Our telephone, like our front door, is owned and paid for by us, not public property. We decide who enters. Telemarketers who enter our home electronically at all hours and fill our answering machine and fax machine are uninvited and unwanted. Their right to free speech does not extend into our home and our private lives.