

Independent ISP such as Sonic.net offer better service and value than the phone companies. Broadband service should be regulated to ensure a level playing field and healthy competition, and more choices for consumers.