

Voice over IP is now available as the primary voice line in homes replacing the existing circuit switch line. The circuit switch line has requirements to support 911 calls so that the 911 operator can identify where the phone is located to provide respondents critical life saving information. This same requirement should also exist for voice over IP as a primary line. Presently, this critical life saving information is not required and often not available.