

I have sent similar comments as that just filed by The California Coalition Of Agencies Serving Deaf & Hard of Hearing Persons and support their comments completely. Sorenson's way of doing business, especially with tax payer's money, is very restrictive and restricts competition. I would have no objection to Sorenson not giving away the free video phones and d-links as it would encourage manufacturers to produce a similar product which will probably result in a lower price that would be affordable to the public.
