

This Easter, while getting ready for church, we had left the television on. Suddenly our sweet Easter morning was flooded with a blaring advertisement for "male enhancement". Could the males that need enhancing at least have these promos aired during times that children and families aren't watching?

We can view the content of certain programming and decide not to watch but are ambushed by these objectionable commercials.

Please take action and help the family.

Thank you for your time.